Yes, that is a great deal, however I opted to buy my Konis from Peak Eurosport since they are a class sponsor. It was only a difference of $30 or so. I believe in "support those that support us"

Which of course I will ultimately do, just trying to get a ballpark on what it is gonna cost me.

I remember they are like 160-170 each front and 115 each rear or so. That was prices from a few years ago from a few parts houses.

Add that up for a reasonable price.
